

HOW READY ARE YOU?

The Queensland Resilience index measures the recognition, recall and actions taken by people in relation to the Get Ready Queensland campaign and gives a measure of public disaster readiness.

In a survey conducted in 2013, of 800 respondents:

85%

did not strongly agree that they knew where to go for information on how to prepare for future severe weather events

85%

did not strongly agree that if they needed to evacuate from their home they would know where to go to

92%

did not strongly agree they feel confident they would receive enough accurate information in a timely fashion from authorities,

75%

did not strongly agree they could rely on friends and family to help if they were affected by a severe weather event